

CTLP Welcomes New Employees!

UNDER NEW MANAGEMENT

A quick glance at the 2023 calendar, reveals that we are now in our third month of the “new year.” Many of us may start the year asking ourselves if this is going to be our “year of change”. At The Community Tax Law Project (CTLP), the answer to that question has been a resounding “yes!”

In December 2022, CTLP bid farewell to our former Executive Director, David Sams. In January 2023, Nancy Rossner received a promotion to Executive Director after serving for over 10 years as CTLP’s Senior Staff Attorney. Nancy is incredibly excited to be leading CTLP in this new role and into CTLP’s fourth decade of assisting Virginians with income tax disputes. Nancy is also currently serving the American Bar Association’s Tax Section as the current Chair of the Pro Bono and Tax Clinics Committee. Nancy’s particular areas of interests at CTLP include assisting survivors of domestic violence with tax issues and assisting families in obtaining tax refunds to which they are entitled.

In October 2022, Admeishaa Bartley joined CTLP as our Administrative Assistant and Program Support. Admeishaa is a York native and moved to Virginia in 2021. She is currently attending Virginia Commonwealth University, where she is pursuing a double major in Political Science and Philosophy. Admeishaa is responsible for the clerical and organizational tasks that keep the office running.

In early February 2023, CTLP welcomed back Gladys Garcia as CTLP’s full-time Paralegal and ESL Outreach Coordinator. Born and raised in Puerto Rico, Gladys moved to Virginia. Gladys supports CTLP’s attorneys in all matters, specializing in working with CTLP’s Spanish speaking clients. Gladys’s focus areas include working with H2A visa workers and domestic violence survivors, and presenting in outreach and educational events throughout the community.

In mid-February 2023, CTLP welcomed Kimberly Griffin as our new Staff Attorney. Kim is a public interest attorney who is excited to serve Virginia’s taxpayers at all levels of income tax disputes. A North Carolina native, Kim is a graduate of North Carolina Central University School of Law and moved to Virginia in 2020. Kim’s prior work includes assisting low-income farmers and landowners with issues arising from their property ownership.
